copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

Mexico and Brazil can reach across and shake in sympathy.

New York City, larger than the remainder of the entire state, is like the tail wagging the dog again.

Our advice to Governor-elect Foss of Massachusetts: Tread lightly on constitutional things, lest they flare up and hit you.

The old war-horse, Gompers, can be depended upon to win out in the end, when it comes to the support of fellow-labor men.

To-day, Uncle Sam's right hand will know what the left hand is doing, and vice versa, because the army and navy meet on the gridiron.

"Everlastingly wallowed" is the way Clarence E. Carr expresses his conviction as to the Bass victory over him in New Hampshire. There is some virtue in knowing when one is licked and being able to take the licking gracefully.

The state of Vermont paid enough money to purchase a satisfactory ventilating system for the State House at Montpelier—something like $35,000—and it is to be hoped that the defects are not permanent.

The purse strings slipped again Thursday, when Mrs. Russell Sage announced her intention of building a "garden city" and Andrew Carnegie gave two more millions to his favorite institution in Pittsburgh. Holidays seem to have a mellowing effect on our over-rich.

Great surprise is expressed that Theodore N. Vail, nearly seventy years of age and twenty years out of the telephone and telegraph business, should be elected to the head of the Western Union telegraph business, as well as that of the telephone trust. Perhaps a part of the secret was his retiring to Vermont and getting a new grip on life.

What would the Vermont solons have done if the Vermont suffragette had become militant like her English sisters and descended on them like a ton of bricks? But then, the Vermont suffragette would not have done anything so undignified and so harmful to her cause. The "rough-house" tactics of the London mob would not be accepted in the United States, and particularly in Vermont.

SHOOTING OF GAYNOR RECALLED.

There has been a deliberation about the case of James J. Gallagher, which might be misconstrued in most any other case of similar gravity. Here it is nearly four months since the time when Gallagher, in a fit of pique over losing his city job, fired a shot at Mayor Gaynor, which came near proving fatal. There was tremendous excitement at the time of the attempted assassination, and some there were who were clamoring for the life of the deluded man and, but for the interference of cooler heads, the would-be assassin might have been pounded into death the moment after committing his assault. But the hot heads were restrained, the wounded man was taken to the hospital and the fight for his life was started, while the miserable man who had tried to rob the official of his life was placed behind the bars to await the outcome. The public proceeded to calm itself after the first brutal shock of the attempted assassination had come upon it, being firmly convinced of the ultimate result and trusting in the proper carriage of justice when the case did come to a trial. Now, after four months nearly—the attack was made on August 9—the accused man is formally charged with the most serious crime which could be brought in the nature of the case, and he is about to be given a trial in the regular order of the courts. At this time the public is able to look at the case in the proper frame of mind; there is no longer the hysteria which pervaded the air at the time of the shooting and immediately following it, but instead a cool, calculating judgment. This does not mean that to the people the enormity of the prisoner's offense has diminished in the least; it has not diminished. Instead, the public through the jury will be able to weigh the case with a marked degree of fairness, unmoved by temporary blinding influences.

REUNITING THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

The Springfield Republican views the possible reunion of the opposing factions in the Republican party as possible:—

"Speculation immediately arises as to the relations between President Taft and the insurgent group in Congress during the coming short session. The insurgents are reported to be ready to reconcile their differences with the administration and become good administration men, provided that the president will recognize them, consult with them and receive them at the White House on the same terms as the old guard. If one can judge from the celebrated Norton letter on federal patronage, which was sent to an insurgent congressman last summer, there ought to be no difficulty in making the insurgents feel at home in the presence of Mr. Taft. The president has shown a disposition, surely, to harmonize the two wings of the Republican party and make the best of the situation which the elections have brought about."

There probably is no one in the councils of the party who is better fitted to bring the insurgents and "stand-patters" together than President Taft. His very nature is conciliatory, and he goes at a delicate duty of this sort in a judicious manner, having due consideration to the claims of both sides to the controversy. As president of the United States and elected by the Republican party, he is in a peculiarly favorable position to end the warfare right now. Here is Taft's opportunity to become the leader of his party in fact, as well as in name.

Current Comment

The Opulent Vermont Farmer.

The prosperous condition of Vermont farmers is reflected by the incident of the Guilford farmer who, in paying a bill in a store handed the clerk a $100 gold certificate instead of a $10 one and never noticed the difference.—Rutland News.

The Granite of Finland.

The granite industry in Finland has developed much of late and, according to a consular report, there are still great possibilities for further extension of this stone, especially granite, than most other European countries. Much attention will probably be paid in the near future to the output of small stone, which can be used for crushing.—From Stone.

What Barre Ought to Do.

The Barre Granite Manufacturers' association has decided to establish the office of a secretary, whose entire time shall be given up to the interests of the organization. Mr. Charles H. Wishart has been chosen for the position, and will undertake a campaign to give greater publicity to the Vermont granites. Despite its name, the association is not strictly local, as it embraces in its membership the entire granite interest of Washington county, including Barre, Montpelier, Northfield, West Berlin and East Barre, and Williamstown, in Orange county. It contains 150 members and is said to be stronger than ever before. Any sign of progression is welcome, but Barre will not realize its full possibilities until it makes an effort to enter the building as well as the monumental field.—From Stone.

WATERBURY.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Redmond Given a Farewell Party.

Waterbury, Nov. 26.—The notice received by Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Redmond of a special Rebekah meeting last evening, brought them to the hall, where they found a number of friends waiting to receive them and to wish them all happiness in their new home at Island Pond. The evening was spent in a most happy manner, games being played and old songs sung. Judge Huntley, in fitting remarks, presented to Mr. and Mrs. Redmond a gift from the members of the lodge, which was accepted in an appreciative manner. All were then initiated, one by one, into the secret work of the kitchen, and after expressing to Mr. and Mrs. Redmond their kindest wishes, all went home with the remembrance of a jolly evening spent together.

Mrs. Redmond has always been a resident of Waterbury, and for a number of years it has been Mr. Redmond's home. He was at one time engineer of the Vermont state hospital and later started in the plumbing business. Recently he has secured the position of manager of the Island Pond Electric company and while his many friends here congratulate him upon his position, yet all are sorry to lose Mr. and Mrs. Redmond from the village. Miss Estelle Redmond, who teaches in Plainfield, was home for the occasion last night.

The following were the quantities used in the Thanksgiving dinner at the Vermont state hospital, 424 pounds of chicken, 25 gallons of oyster, 7 bunches of bananas, 100 pounds of candy, 410 individual chicken pies, 135 mince pies, 1 barrel of cranberries, 5 barrels of squashes. Owing to the scarcity of turkeys, Supt. Grout was not able to purchase the same for the hospital, so roast chicken was served instead. Altogether, 725 people were served, 600 of who were patients. In the evening a concert was given by the nurses, only employees of the institution taking part.

ST. JOHNSBURY.

Arthur Taplin spent a part of the week in Boston on business.

Mary Simpson of Burlington spent a portion of the week with friends in town.

Alexander Dunnett will return to-day from Brattleboro, where he has been looking after his duties as United States district attorney.

Walter May, who is now teaching as principal of the Lebanon high school, spent the holiday in town with his sister, Mrs. Maude A. May.

Ninety couples assembled last evening under the auspices of the Crescent club and enjoyed a social dance. Music was furnished by Madame Brock's orchestra of seven pieces and a most enjoyable time was afforded.

Among the students home for the Thanksgiving holidays are Miss Jean Stanley of the New England Conservatory of Music; Madeline Randall of Emerson school of oratory; Stanley Grant of Trinity; Hugh McKinnon, Claude Goodrich, Albert Rieker of Dartmouth.
